

German logistic consult group sets up regional headquarters in Hong Kong

Global logistics consultancy, adi Consult, officially announced today (18 June) the opening of its new regional headquarters in Hong Kong.

Originating in Germany, the company plans to use its Hong Kong office to coordinate business across the region and, in particular, as a springboard in the Mainland China market.

Principal and Managing Partner of adi Consult Management Holding Ltd Hong Kong, Mr. Juergen John, said, "After much study and careful evaluation, we, and our associates in the adi Consult Group, decided that setting up this regional headquarters in Hong Kong would provide a wonderful springboard onto the mainland, as well as offering us the opportunity to serve the local business community and our international clients who have business activities across the region."

adi Consult plans to offer expert services in supply chain optimization, executive search, merger and acquisition and post-M&A integration activities and management audits. These services are in addition to offering clients the benefit of its strong logistics track-record across Europe and the US.

Liana Sun, also a Principal and Managing Partner of adi Consult Management Holding Ltd Hong Kong, added, "We recognize the opportunity this new regional office offers us for providing logistical consultancies to the clients in the Greater China market."

"In the months to come, we will be refining and expanding our service offerings in China, beginning with Shanghai, to serve a broader range of customers. Our regional headquarters remains in Hong Kong, however we believe there is a higher demand for the specialized services we can offer in China, and we intend to satisfy

I am sure adi Consult will find this city the ideal platform for its China and wider Asia-Pacific expansion plan."
